

ON THE RECORD.

Eric Haas, president and CEO of A.R.M.S., is the man to know to handle any records and information management needs. With only five years in the industry, Haas is a real-life example that drive and determination can positively influence results.

Haas purchased the struggling business and transformed it into a thriving company. He took A.R.M.S. from a local operation to the largest full-service records and information management center in Northeast Wisconsin. Passionate about his business, Haas has guided A.R.M.S. to 50 percent growth in the last two years – an impressive accomplishment in a tough economy.

Records management and storage requirements are constantly changing. Committed to being a leader in the industry, Haas stays on top of the current trends and remains up-to-date with his certifications. He never stops searching for ways to increase the services offered to current and potential customers; Haas pursues opportunities to better the industry while addressing emerging needs.

Haas has taken leadership roles in organizations that represent the records and information management industry. And to meet the changing needs of customers in the health care industry, Haas joined the Wisconsin Health Information Management Association to better assist the facilities with the conversion of their records to electronic format.
