For the second year in a row, the National Association of Information Destruction Inc. (NAID), based in Phoenix, has awarded Automated Records Management Systems Inc. (A.R.M.S.) its AAA certification.

A.R.M.S. has been providing information management and protection services for more than a quarter of a century.

According to NAID, its mission is to promote the information destruction industry and the standards and ethics of its member companies. NAID certification establishes standards in a variety of areas, including employee hiring and screening, the destruction process, insurance and facility security.

"Protection of records for companies is more important than ever, and we take the responsibility of keeping this information safe and secure very seriously," says Eric Haas, president of A.R.M.S. "Receiving this designation now two years in a row shows our commitment to provide superior services to our clients."

To be qualified for the certification, A.R.M.S. undergoes an annual, unannounced company-wide third-party audit to review company policies, procedures, employment records, equipment and security.

Founded in 1983, A.R.M.S. provides information management and protection services to businesses throughout Wisconsin and Upper Michigan. As a full-service commercial records center, A.R.M.S. provides "Information Management from Inception through Destruction" for customers ranging from small businesses to Fortune 500 firms.
